

“The Never-Ending Bloodline” (dated 31 Jan 2005, 3/11/05)
(English Translation of the song “I tai hinekkok na hãga” I trongkon i familia-ku)

Introduction: Instruments only.....

- I. Then one day I wanted to know,
How my last name came about, from my Grandmother and Grandfather,
Because my last name is in two (parts), from my Mother and my Father,
Because from their last names that mine became a Babauta and a Chaco

- II. So the first thing I did was I wrote my full name down on the paper.
Then I also wrote down my Dad’s full name and Mom’s full name too.
Then I continued to write down my Grandmother’s and Grandfather’s full name too.
Because now I am trying to find out about my family tree.

Chorus: It’s good to know now from the paper that was given to me,
Espinosa, Rivera, Quintanilla, San Nicolas, Patricio, and the Delgado
Sablan, Eguiguan, Santos, Muna and also the Taimanglo.
All of these middle/last names have made my existence possible.

- III. A lot of families now-a-days are trying to find out who they are.
Who their grandfathers and grandmothers are from the Ancestors.
So now it’s good to know who are your families.
Because the never-ending bloodline is from your family tree.

- IV. So now you start with yourself and your family too
Then go to MARC’s room (Micronesia Area Research Center) located in Mangilao.
Then enter your parent’s/grandparent’s middle/last names in the computer,
Back from the Spaniard’s time/era and also from the 1920 US Census.

Chorus: Repeat again twice (2x)
It’s good to know now from the paper that was given to me,
Espinosa, Rivera, Quintanilla, San Nicolas, Patricio, and the Delgado
Sablan, Eguiguan, Santos, Muna and also the Taimanglo.
All of these middle/last names have made my existence possible.

Because the never-ending bloodline is from your family tree.
Because the never-ending bloodline is from your family tree.

Ending: Instruments
